As you go home after a hard day's work, and you get off the subway train, you sometimes have to walk a long way to the exit or to change trains. Suddenly in the noise, some music is heard. Those are street musicians. You take out a coin from your pocket and throw it into their hat or instrument case. These musicians bring color and life to the city streets. Street musicians are aged between 17 and 30 years. Some of them are men, some women. They play classical music, pop or folk music, old and new songs. Many musicians are former university students or professional musicians.

Andrew Hain, for example, was once a music student, but he gave up music and became a painter. Now he plays in the underground because he doesn't want to forget how to play. His girlfriend is a painter, too. She helps him to collect the money. Another street musician, David MacNell, tells new players:

"Learn new songs all the time, or else you'll have fewer and fewer listeners. Wear bright clothes to attract attention. Make sure that the places where you choose to play are warm. The best places are bridges and certainly the underground."

On Sundays, Hyde Park is the best place, as the speakers here address the people. The street musicians are doing their business with the many tourists who visit the park. The weather is one of the worst problems. It is not so easy to play the violin or the guitar on a rainy November day in London and try to smile.

A winning smile

Lucy walked slowly toward the school building. Her stomach fluttered with butterflies. Today she was starting school in a new town. Hopefully, she would make some new friends, too. She turned around and waved to her parents, and they gave her a thumbs up; if they only knew how nervous she was.

At her old school, Lucy had many friends whom she had known since kindergarten. When Lucy got braces, it was no big deal. Her friends never made fun of her. But that was the past. The future was here-inside the new school.

The students in Lucy's class were friendly, but Lucy didn't smile much. She didn't want anyone to see her braces. Finally, it was time for gym class. Luckily for Lucy, they were playing baseball-her favorite sport.

"Lucy," the coach announced, "play shortstop today, okay?"

"Sure thing!" Lucy said as she put on a glove and trotted out to her place between second and third base. She scanned the field and glanced over to second base, where a tall boy stood.

Suddenly, the batter slugged the ball in her direction. The ball bounced several times before Lucy caught it. As the runner headed toward second base, Lucy threw the ball to the tall boy. The runner was out!

"Good throw!" the tall boy said with a smile. His smile was bright, metallic, and shiny, just like hers. She smiled back, allowing her braces to show. They both laughed, and Lucy knew her future was going to be just fine.

11. Lucy's parents

A) help her    B) make her life better    C) gave her a thumbs up
